

APA (6th edition) REFERENCING

Last updated May 2011

This guide is primarily for students doing assignments at Curtin University, not for those publishing using the APA 6th style.

If you are publishing in the APA 6th style, please consult the APA publication manual:

American Psychological Association. (2009). Publication manual of the American Psychological Association (6th ed.). Washington, DC: Author.

1. It is important that you check the assignment guide of your Department or School as some details may vary from the guidelines on this sheet. You may be penalised for not using the referencing style that is required by your School/Department.

2. The APA manual states that “you are encouraged to provide a page or paragraph number” (see p. 171) when paraphrasing. You must provide a page number when quoting. Again, refer to your School/Department’s guidelines, or consult your lecturer or supervisor.

What is Referencing?

Referencing is a standardised method of acknowledging sources of information and ideas that you have used in your assignment in a way that uniquely identifies their source. Direct quotations, facts and figures, as well as ideas and theories, from both published and unpublished works, must be referenced.

There are many acceptable forms of referencing. This information sheet provides a brief guide to the APA referencing style for in-text citations and for creating the Reference List (examples are below). Within the text of the assignment the author’s name is given first, followed by the publication date. Include page numbers for direct quotations and also where it is useful to provide a page number. A reference list at the end of the assignment contains the full details of all the in-text citations.

Why Reference?

Referencing is necessary to avoid plagiarism, to verify quotations, and to enable readers to follow-up and read more fully the cited author’s arguments.

Steps Involved in Referencing

1. Note down the full bibliographic details of the source from which the information is taken. Include the relevant page number(s).

In the case of a book, ‘bibliographical details’ refers to: author/editor, year of publication, title, edition, volume number, place of publication and publisher as found on the front and back of the title page. (Not all of these details will necessarily be applicable).

In the case of a journal article the details required include: author of the article, year of publication, title of the article, title of the journal, volume and issue number of the journal, and page numbers.

For all electronic information, in addition to the above you should note the DOI (Digital Object Identifier) if one exists, and if one does not exist, the web address (URL) of the database you found the article in.

2. Insert the citation at the appropriate place within the text of the document (see examples below).
3. Provide a reference list at the end of the document (see examples below).

In-Text Citations

Use the name of the author, followed by the year of publication when citing references within the text of an assignment. Where authors of different references have the same family name, include the author's initials in the in-text citation i.e. (Hamilton, C. L., 1994) or C. L. Hamilton (1994). If two or more authors are cited at the same point in the text then they are included in the same in-text citation, separated by a semicolon, e.g., (Brown, 1991; Smith, 2003). They are presented alphabetically by author.

When directly quoting from another source, the relevant page number (e.g. Smith, 2008, p.7) , or paragraph number in the case of .html documents (e.g. British Empire 1922, 2009, para.4), must be given and double quotation marks placed around the quote. When paraphrasing or referring to an idea from another source which is a book or lengthy document, the APA 6th manual (p.171) encourages you to provide page or paragraph numbers, especially for long or complex texts, to help the reader locate the information if they wish.

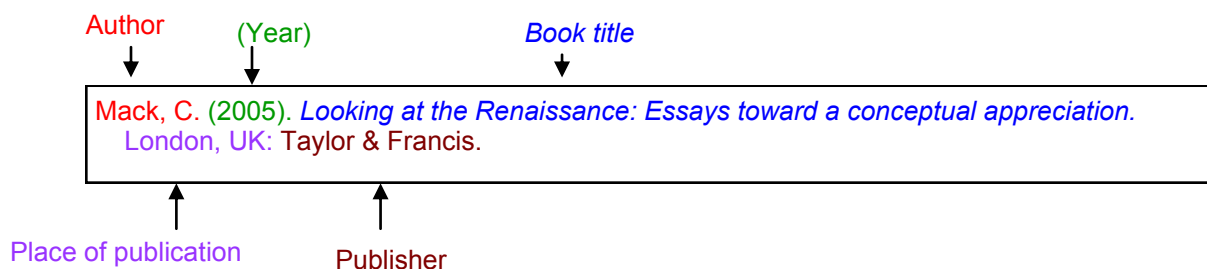

What is a Reference List?

1. A reference list includes books, chapters, journal articles etc that you cite in the text of your essay.
2. A bibliography is a list of relevant sources for background or for further reading.
3. The reference list is arranged alphabetically by author – at the end of your essay..
4. Where an item has no author it is cited and listed by its title.
5. The APA style requires the second and subsequent lines of the reference to be indented.

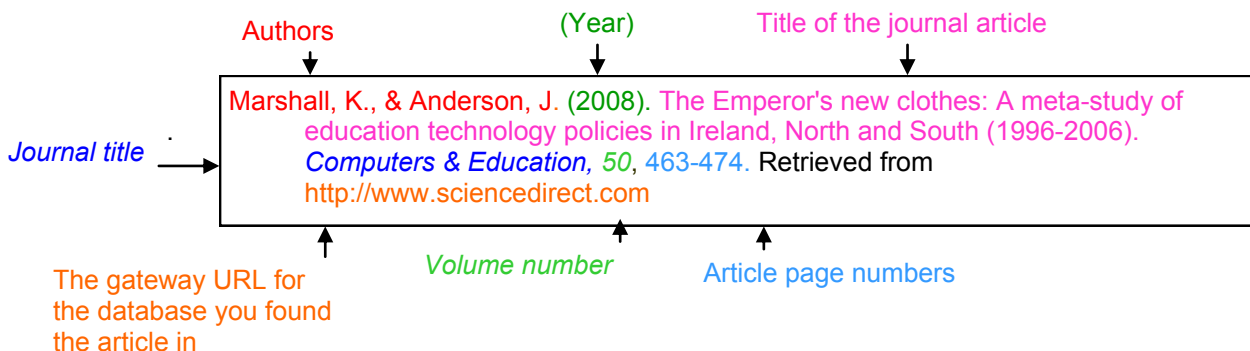

What is a Reference/Citation?

A reference or citation consists of elements that allow the reader to trace the original book, article or website you have consulted and cited. Here are some examples in the APA referencing style.

Book:

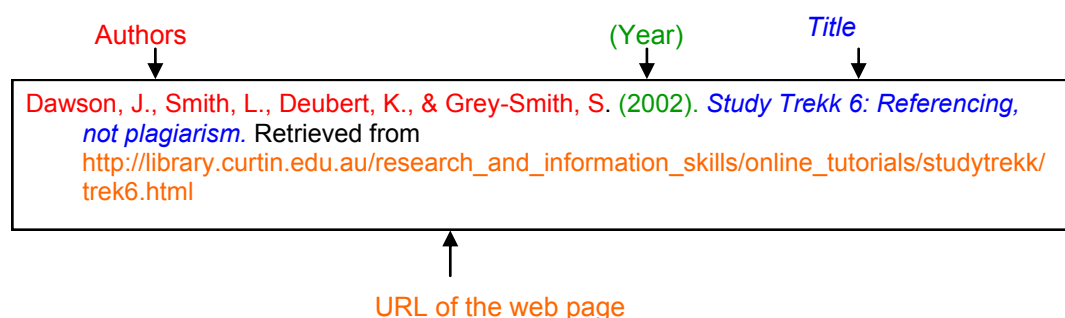

Journal article from a database:

Note: If a DOI (Digital Object Identifier) is provided, use the DOI instead of the database URL, but without the words 'Retrieved from' preceding it.

EndNote users, please note: Make any manual changes when you have finished creating your reference list with EndNote or convert your word document to plain text by clicking on the drop down arrow at Convert Citations and Bibliography and selecting Convert to Plain text, then make your changes in the new document this will create. Failure to follow this procedure will result in manual changes being lost, and the references reverting to their original form once the reference list is updated with any new entries.

It is very important that you check the assignment guide for your Department or School as some details, e.g. punctuation, may vary from the guidelines on this page. You may be penalised for not conforming to your School's requirements.
